

Case History

Salt water cleaning

Rainbow International had become regular visitors to the National Sealife Centre in Birmingham, as their services were frequently required to clean-up following escape of water incidents from the various fish tanks.

As a lot of the tanks contains salt water, the clean-up operation is slightly more complex than a 'normal' escape of water job. Any affected carpeted areas would require a thorough carpet deep clean, to remove any salt remnants left behind once the liquid had dried. Due to the nature of the business, often these jobs needed to be completed quickly and thoroughly before the Sealife Centre opens to the public at 10am each morning.

Rainbow's nationwide network of branches are all completely flexible and can work hours to suit public opening times. All branches are fully trained and qualified to ensure that whatever the peril, the correct process is selected to ensure the safe & successful restoration of carpet and upholstery items.
